▲ KINZO AIR
BY BAU+ART

Sculptural simplicity characterizes the desk and storage units that make up Kinzo Air, a collection created to enhance the modern office space. A new file-storage cabinet has been added to the existing line of products, as well as a high-pressure laminate finish.

▲ WGS
BY MONICA ARMANI
FOR GALOTTI & RADICE

The WGS table – part of a modular system that also includes screens, stools and walls – comes in nine sizes, one for every office space imaginable. Bases are in brushed natural oak or stained wengé. Glass tabletops can be painted if desired. Felt-covered accessories come in four colours.

▲ STRUTTURA QUATTRO
BY DAVIDE VERCELLI
FOR LIBEROSTILE

Featuring 29 oak-veneered plywood panels, the sculptural Struttura Quattro serves as a desk or conference table. Its rather organic 'body' is clearly visible through the glass tabletop. Fifteen steel braces and flat-head screws connect the panels.

▲ DR
BY CLAUDIO BELLINI FOR FREZZA

A good choice for the home office or meeting room – it would even work as a dining table – is Claudio Bellini's DR desk, which comes in various sizes and with a glass or wooden top. The base is made from one piece of solid walnut. A lacquered version is also available.

▲ BETA
BY PIERANDREI ASSOCIATI FOR TECNO

Beta blends technology and recyclable materials in its three product families: worktops, containers and accessories. The 'container', or storage space, supports a 'worktop' which functions as an interactive platform that can be customized with 'accessories'. Comes in a variety of colours and sizes.

► ECO N
BY REISS

The push of a button to activate a built-in motor transforms the Eco N from a sit-down desk to a stand-up table. Height adjustment, which varies per model, ranges from 68 to 130 cm. Manually operated models are available as well.
